Forecast For East of England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1600 on Friday 14 May 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
Mostly dry overnight. Rain, followed by showers, perhaps thundery Saturday.

This Evening and Tonight:
Daytime showers easing during the evening, but staying rather cloudy for most. The odd overnight shower cannot be ruled out, but most parts will be dry until around dawn. A band of rain will then spread northeast into southwestern parts. Minimum temperature 6 deg C (43 deg F).

Saturday:
Cloudy start, with rain spreading northeast. This mostly light, before breaking up into showers through the morning. Brighter spells and heavy showers then follow, with a risk of thunder. Maximum temperature 15 deg C (59 deg F).

Outlook for Sunday to Tuesday:
Staying cool, with variable amounts of cloud, sunny spells and showers throughout. Ongoing risk of thundery showers especially Sunday. Drier and chilly overnight with showers easing and some clear spells.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.